Hicks Oakley Chessell Williams is a partnership formed in 2006 by a merger between the firms of Hicks & Oakley established in 1983 by John Hicks and Tony Oakley and Chessell Williams established in 1997 by Murray Chessell and David Williams. The current partners are David Williams, Tony Oakley and Matthew Hicks. John Hicks and Murray Chessell continue to practice as consultants.

Tony is an Accredited Specialist in business law with over thirty five years experience in corporate practice. He is also a Notary Public and has dealt with hundreds of international legal matters, both private and corporate. Tony has completed the world intellectual property organisation course for mediators in intellectual property disputes and also on international patent protection.

Tony acts as an honorary solicitor for a variety of sporting and community bodies and balances his commitments with an exercise program of rowing, cycling and other sports.
